

WASHINGTON, SUNDAY MORNING, MAY 16, 1897.

OUR WONDERFUL

May Shoe Selling

continues with unabated activity. We could easily explain why we can afford to sell such well-made, handsome shoes at the remarkably low prices we do, but you don't care for any "wherefores"—facts are good enough for you.

The following special values in fine Summer Footwear are put on sale tomorrow. As these qualities can probably never be duplicated again for the price, you had better get fitted soon.

Ladies' Boots at $1.50

That can't be matched for $2.

10 different styles, on shapes and perfect fitting lasts as were ever sold for $3. 4 kinds in brown kid, 6 kinds in black. These are fine lace shapes: Common Sense, Pear Shape, Square Toe, Opera Toe, Egg-Shape Toe, Needle.

Ladies' Oxfords at $2.

Excellent $2.50 quality.

We are proud of them. Impossible to get any better leather or superior shoemaking at any price than there is in these. 20 different kinds of them—8 styles in brown kid, 12 styles in black kid. The brown and black kid have either patent leather or kid tips.

Men's Shoes for $2.50.

Excellent $3 values.

12 different sorts—every pair has hand-sewed, welted, extra wide flexible soles. 6 sorts of tan, 6 sorts of black, faced, gutters, of low-cuts. Bull Dog, Medium Round, Wide English, Narrow Round, Square Toe, English Toe.

Men's Shoes at $3.00.

The equals of any $4 kind.

These are virtually the best shoes to be had at any price for wear, comfort and style. Made on all the popular toes, in faced, gutters, and Oxford ties, of best calf, patent leather, black kid, kangaroo, brown kid, brown calf, sizes 5 to 12, widths A to E.

What Lawson—"The Terrible Swede"—thinks of our Bicycle Shoes.

Washington, 5-4, 1897.

Messrs. Wm. Hahn & Co.:

GENTS.—It affords me pleasure in saying that the pair of "Perfect" Bicycle Shoes I bought from you are the most comfortable and best looking Cycle Shoes I ever wore.

A Remodeling Sale that means something.

We are selling at a liberal reduction not because we like to, but because it is imperative to lessen the stock before building operations commence. We shall, of course, lose money, but we should lose more if the goods remained to get spoiled. These prices are cut deep enough to insure what we want—an empty store before the workmen take possession.

Wrappers at Half Price.

One lot of the French Female Wrappers—handsome assortment of patterns, extra wide skirts, made to sell at $1.

500 fine Lawn Wrappers, worth $1.50, for 65c.

POWDERLY'S CASE PASSED

Supreme Council of the A. P. A. Fails to Act.

Antagonism of Labor Bodies Not Considered at the Closing Session. Beneficiary Branch.

The supreme council of the American Protective Association has concluded its session and adjourned sine die. The most important work transacted was the consideration of the report of the committee on constitution and by-laws.

There was a warm discussion over a recommendation to extend the term of office of the president from one to two years, and resulted finally in the defeat of the proposition. Another one coming from the same committee, proposing to increase the supreme president's salary from $2,500 to $3,000, was adopted. The salary of the supreme secretary was also increased from $1,500 to $2,000 per annum.

A new system of representation has been decided upon by the supreme council. Hereafter delegates will not be sent to represent each 2,000 members, but so many delegates will be allowed to come from each Congressional district in the States. In the District of Columbia there will be one delegate for each local council.

The American Protective Association did not take any action on the resolution against Terrence V. Powderly. The latter is a candidate for Commissioner of Labor and early in the week a delegate from the Eastern section of the country offered a resolution declaring the sentiment of the order that Powderly should not be given the appointment. This resolution never came before the council for a vote, but was discussed somewhat at length at the time it was offered.

It developed that Powderly is being fought by certain labor organizations and that the resolution would line the A. P. A. with certain associations. This was not deemed advisable as the order desired particularly to refrain from becoming involved in a labor contest. It was not certain that Powderly's opponents outside of the A. P. A. were any more agreeable to the order than he is, and therefore it was decided to let the resolution stay buried in the committee to which it was sent.

The next session of the supreme body will be held in Washington. This was decided upon after a heated contest, in which the District was strongly supported by Major Jerome Burke, Dr. North, Dr. Gottwald and Mr. J. Frank Traazaga.

MORE BAD QUARTERS USED

Swindler of Car Conductors Still Able to Do Business.

BICYCLE OFFICER AT WORK

Woman Counterfeit "Shover" Eludes All Efforts at Capture—Her Respectable Appearance Makes Police Hesitate—Alarmed at the Search and Glides Quietly Away.

It develops that the pretty young woman in black who has been promiscuously passing counterfeit quarters on street car conductors, as told in yesterday morning's Times, had several narrow escapes from capture by the police Friday afternoon.

The first intimation Inspector Hollinberger had of the woman's whereabouts was when a young man, who had been following her about on his bicycle, called at police headquarters and informed him that the female counterfeit "shover" was at the city postoffice.

Detective Serg. Johnson at once went to the postoffice with the wheelman, but upon arriving there he found that she had gone over to Ninth street and boarded an electric car.

The sergeant at once started the wheelman after her, while he, with Supt. Exendevor, of the Metropolitan police, took another car and proceeded to the wharf, believing that the woman might take a ferryboat for Alexandria. In this, however, they were mistaken.

The wheelman overtook the car and informed the conductor the woman was a counterfeiter. He also requested him not to allow her to leave the car, but carry her to the company's office, at the foot of Fourth and-a-half street. Accordingly when she touched the electric button to stop the train at a point in South Washington the conductor blurted out:

"You can't get off, miss; this is a through train and don't make any stops."

The woman was accordingly taken to the company's office and interrogated. She proved to be a plausible talker and was allowed to depart. Had the railroad authorities at that time sent for the police the dangerous woman, who has proved to be as elusive as a flea, would have been behind the bars instead of wandering around seemingly at her own sweet will.

The railroad officials, however, instructed the man on the bicycle to follow the car the woman had boarded in the meantime. The conductor was ordered also to turn her over to the first policeman he saw. When the sixth street depot was reached the conductor stopped his train and requested Policeman Lamb, who is stationed there, to arrest the woman. That officer replied that there was a patrolman stationed at the Ninth and F streets junction, and suggested that she be turned over to him.

The woman, however, alighted from the car when it made its regular stop at Pennsylvania and Ninth street and escaped in the throng on that thoroughfare.

The wheelman kept the counterfeiter in sight and followed her to the Baltimore and Ohio depot. She had by that time concluded that matters were becoming entirely too warm for her here, and decided to leave the city forthwith. While she was purchasing a ticket for Baltimore the bicycle spotter approached Policeman Harlow, who is stationed at the depot, and informed him that the woman was a counterfeiter, requesting him to place her under arrest.

The respectable appearance of the woman perhaps averted the officer, for he declined to arrest her without orders from his superior officers or a warrant. He could not, he added, take the woman into custody on the mere say so of a stranger.

In the meantime the woman had purchased her ticket for Baltimore and was on her way to the city of the amateur bicycle detective.

The police have learned that the woman passed fully 100 counterfeit quarters in this city, principally on the street cars. All the information in the possession of Inspector Hollinberger has been

Dr. Van Hummel and W. E. English Batter Each Other.

Difficulty Arose About the Removal of a Mirror From the Physician's Office Quarters.

Indianapolis, Ind., May 15.—W. E. English, the millionaire son of the late William H. English, had a personal encounter with Dr. William Henry Van Hummel today.

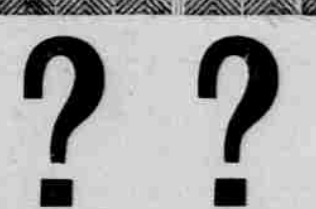

The latter's offices are in a building owned by English, and, as the structure is soon to be torn down for improvements, English went to the offices and demanded possession of a mirror which has long been in the English family.

Van Hummel refused to permit its removal until the lease expires, and a fight resulted. Two doors were broken, and the doctor used his fists, while English did good work with a cane. Arrests will follow.

POTTER IS NOW FOR MUDD

He Will Support the Maryland Congressman for Senator.

Neither He Nor Capt. Gordon Longer Doubt the Fifth Maryland District Man's Patriotism.

Congressman Sidney E. Mudd, of the Fifth district of Maryland, has proved himself the political magician of the East. It has been learned beyond any contradiction that he has succeeded in so pacifying his opponents that now some of the bitterest have announced themselves as in line with the Charles county Representative.

The latest acquisition to the Mudd Senatorial forces is Capt. Potter, of Laurel district. The two captains (Capt. Potter and Capt. Gordon) have been persistent enemies of Mr. Mudd. They have worked day and night against his aspirations. They together organized anti-Mudd clubs in their respective districts and openly announced that if Congressman Mudd ascended to the Senatorial seat it would be over their political corpses.

Capt. Potter made no secret of the fact that his opposition was the result of Laquies concerning Mr. Mudd's patriotism. The latter was charged with being in favor of sectarian appropriations and not particularly strong enough against the unity of church and state. Capt. Gordon characterized the Mudd element as nothing but political leaders. It was these same men that unsentenced Gordon delegates at the county convention held last year to nominate a candidate for Congress. The Mudd men won. His opponents refused to line up. They began an organized opposition, which was carried into the election, but failed to accomplish its purpose.

As early as last January plans were laid to secure the selection of Mudd members of the legislature, which will have the closing of a United States Senator. The anti-Muddites discovered this scheme and devised one of their own to frustrate the Congressman. They began by organizing a Republican club at Bladensburg, which was decidedly against Mr. Mudd. Its promoters were ex-Congressman Coffin, Capt. C. C. Gordon and Capt. Potter.

Now all that is to be abandoned. They have been inoculated with a virus that has brought them around all right, and they are now on the road to recovery. Capt. Potter's friends would not believe that he had changed his course, but it can be asserted positively that he has. He himself is the authority for the statement.

"I am satisfied with Mr. Mudd's Americanism," he declared yesterday. "We have settled all differences that may have existed in the past, and I shall support Mr. Mudd for the United States Senate."

"My party demands this of me. I believe Mr. Mudd will vote against sectarian appropriations, and I do not doubt that he is thoroughly patriotic. If I want to vote for Mr. Mudd I do not see that it is any body's business but my own. I am willing to determine whether or not I am voting against my principles."

Thus did Capt. Potter declare himself.

All of this is taking place in the Republican party. Senator Gordon is saying nothing. No one knows or has the slightest intimation who the Democratic nominees will be. There will be three of them, however, as the county is entitled to that representation at the Maryland assembly, and this year a State Senator is to be chosen also.

Report of the Comptroller.

The report of the Comptroller of the Currency for the week ending yesterday is as follows:

National bank notes outstanding—

Currency $232,249,621

Gold notes 85,740

Total $232,335,361

National bank notes issued yesterday $1,671,530

National bank notes destroyed yesterday 2,152,620
